1 Corinthians 8:6: "Yet for us, there is one God, the Father, from whom all things came and for whom we live; and there is but one Lord, Jesus Christ, through whom all things came and through whom we live."

In this text, Paul reminds us of the centrality of Christ in all things. As believers, Jesus is not just an important figure in our faith—He is at the center of everything. Our life, purpose, and relationship with God flow through Jesus.

Paul passionately declares two foundational truths. First, everything came into being through Christ. The world, our lives, and all we perceive exist because of Him. He is the divine agent through whom God brought everything into existence. This echoes John 1:3, which tells us, "Through Him, all things were made; without Him, nothing was made that has been made."

Second, not only is Jesus central to creation, but He is also the one through whom we live. Our spiritual life, our salvation, our hope—all of it is made possible because of Christ. His life, death, and resurrection connect us to God. Without Jesus, we would be lost and separated from the Father by our sins. Through Christ, we are reconciled to God, given new life, and empowered to live according to His will.

The centrality of Christ means that He is not just part of our faith. He is our faith. Everything in our faith revolves around Him. We do not merely live for Him; we live through Him. Every breath, every moment of spiritual growth, and every step we take in our walk with God is because of Jesus. When we make decisions, face challenges, and rejoice in victories, it all points back to Him.
